

The first thing to do is open the video you want in one window, and your new post in another. This will make the copy/paste process a lot easier.

The image shows a YouTube video player interface. At the top is the YouTube logo and a search bar. Below the logo is a navigation bar with buttons: Edit Video, Annotations, AudioSwap, Captions and Subtitles, Insight, and Promote. The video title is "Driving over Guardsman Pass, part 1" by the channel "srossinet", which has 25 videos and a "Subscribe" button. The video player shows a dirt road winding through a forested hillside under a cloudy sky. The video progress bar indicates 2:48 / 9:58. Below the player, the channel name "srossinet" and the upload date "July 12, 2010" are displayed. The video description reads: "Instead of braving road construction on I-80, we decided to go from Midway, o...". There are buttons for "Like", "Dislike", "Save to", and "Share". A blue circle highlights the "<Embed>" button, with the text "Click on this button" written in blue next to it. A "Respond to this video..." text box is at the bottom left. On the right side, there is a vertical list of video thumbnails.

The screenshot shows a video player interface. On the left is a large gray rectangle representing the video frame, with a play button icon in the center. To the right of the video frame, the text "Now this is what you'll have, you can type around it and publish it just like normal." is displayed in a large, bold, blue font. The top of the interface features a toolbar with various icons for editing and publishing. The bottom of the interface has a navigation bar with a "Post Options" link, a "Location:" field with a dropdown menu, a "Labels:" field with a text input, and a "Show all" link.

When, in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable rights, that among these are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed. That whenever any form of government becomes destructive to these ends, it is the right of the people to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their safety and happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shown that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are

He has refused his assent to laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has forbidden his governors to pass laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them.

He has refused to pass other laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of representation in the legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only.

He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual,

Now all you have to do is publish it and you're done.
